Prime Rate Cut

NEW YORK (AP) — Major banks lowered their prime rate of interest Friday for the second time in nine days, reflecting a slackening demand for loans and growing availability of lending funds.

First National City Bank of New York was the first to make the new cut in its maximum interest rate for its most credit-worthy borrowers—chiefly large corporations—to 6 1/2 per cent from 6 3/4 per cent.

The move was quickly followed by Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co., Chemical Bank, Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., Chase Manhattan Bank, Bank of New York, Irving Trust, First Pennsylvania Banking & Trust Co., Crocker-Citizens National Bank in San Francisco, and many others.

President Nixon said he was pleased by the prime rate cut and added in a statement released by the White House: "We are hopeful it will lead in the long term to a decline in mortgage rates and in other rates."

William Daegling, vice president of Crocker-Citizens National, said he was not convinced the prime rate had bottomed out.

Harvester Strike

CHICAGO (AP) — Negotiations for International Harvester Co. and the United Auto Workers met again Friday but reported no progress toward settling a strike of 41,000 union members at plants in 10 states.

A UAW official said shortly after the strike began Wednesday that the walkout would not be a long one but a third consecutive day of negotiations apparently failed to resolve the wage dispute.

No decision was made on whether talks would continue through the weekend.

UAW members, who currently average $4.12 an hour at Harvester plants, are demanding that the manufacturer of farm equipment and farm machinery match UAW contracts signed with General Motors Corp., Ford Motor Co., and the Caterpillar Tractor Co.

Workers are seeking a 30 per cent pay raise spread over three years and an early retirement program.

Concern Over Envoy

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Concern mounted Friday for Swiss Ambassador Giovanni Bucher, whose release has taken longer than that of any previous kidnap hostage in Brazil after the ransom was paid.

More than a day after 70 political prisoners were landed in Santiago, Chile, in compliance with the terrorists' demands, there still was no sign of the 57-year-old diplomat, abducted 40 days ago.

There was speculation that the kidnappers did not release Bucher because they had been frightened off by the heavy police patrols throughout Rio. The abductors may have feared that they would be nabbed if they emerged from their hideaway to turn the envoy loose.

In Brazil's past three diplomatic kidnappings, terrorists have released their prisoner hours after newspapers printed radiophotos of the prisoners' arrival abroad.

This time terrorists were confronted with a discreet, but powerful security net throughout Rio.

Police and army agents were given photographs of Bucher and patrolled the streets of the center and the suburbs in radio-equipped cars or on foot in plainclothes.

In notes to the government, the Popular Revolutionary Vanguard which claimed responsibility for the kidnapping, had asked authorities to call off their search as a condition for Bucher's freedom.

In Santiago, the 70 ransomed prisoners remained confined to the grounds of a Chilean government building where they have been staying since their arrival early Thursday.

Chilean government sources said orders had been issued to hold the 70 until Bucher's release.

Commonwealth--Arms

SINGAPORE (AP) — Prime Minister Edward Heath gave a cool reception Friday to critics of Britain's plan to sell arms to South Africa, declaring that the Commonwealth is not a tribunal "to sit in final judgment of the policies and the actions of its members."

In a keynote address to the Commonwealth conference, Heath said that the 31-nation association could be destroyed by attempts to limit the rights of member states to pursue their own national policies and interests.

Without referring directly to South Africa, Heath spelled out his argument for pressing on with a policy of military cooperation with that country, whose white supremacist government has incurred the ire of many Commonwealth members.

The British leader noted that the Soviet Union, having built up a powerful naval presence in the Mediterranean, now seems set to move into the Indian Ocean, and Britain needs South Africa's help to protect the sea lanes.

Heath stressed that the Commonwealth was "a body of friends free to come and go as they wish."

"We should think carefully," he said, "before allowing this friendship to be fragmented by misunderstanding."

Will Notify Pesticide Makers

Begin Move Against DDT

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bowing to a federal court order, the new Environmental Protection Agency began Friday a long-awaited move to ban the use of DDT.

William D. Ruckelshaus, EPA administrator, said makers of the chemical pesticide will be notified next week that they have 30 days to quit selling it in interstate commerce.

Friday's action was the result of a Jan. 6 court order directing EPA to begin immediate proceedings for banning all remaining uses of DDT.

The order followed a lawsuit brought by the Environmental Defense Fund and others who sought speedier federal action on restricting the use of pesticides.

"We have decided not to request the Justice Department to challenge the court order," Ruckelshaus said.

The notices to manufacturers next week will call for "cancellation" of federal registration for sale of pesticides in interstate commerce. Withdrawal of this registration means that the product no longer can be sold across state lines.

Such orders, however, do not in themselves ban pesticides from retail shelves, nor necessarily from sale within single states.

Ruckelshaus explained that when the cancellation process is used pesticide makers can appeal the ruling and continue selling their products until their pleas are settled.

But Ruckelshaus also announced that the possibility of a tougher and more direct approach will be explored in a 60-day review beginning Jan. 12. This study will involve both DDT and another chemical, the weedkiller 2,4,5-T. This will involve the more direct route of suspension of federal permits on grounds a pesticide is an "imminent hazard" to public health.

A suspension order—rarely used in the past—bars interstate sale of a product regardless of legal appeals by manufacturers.

Registration for DDT use around homes, aquatic areas and on tobacco crops—accounting for about 35 per cent of the total use—was ordered cancelled a year ago.

Those orders were held up for some products because of appeals by manufacturers.

The principal crops still approved for DDT—unless wiped out by the latest EPA action—are cotton, citrus fruit and certain vegetables.

Use of 2,4,5-T was suspended or banned immediately by the Agriculture Department last year as a health hazard when used in liquid form around homes, and in all forms on water areas.

But the drawn-out method of cancellation was used against 2,4,5-T on food crops. One of the points made by environmentalists was that an immediate suspension should be ordered for food crop use.

The main use of 2,4,5-T, however, has been as a brush and weedkiller on livestock pastures and range lands. No move against the use has been made by the government.

New York Police Continue Dispute

NEW YORK (AP) — City police patrolmen reported to their stationhouses Friday, but an estimated 75 per cent refused to perform their regular assignments as a wildcat job action over a pay dispute spread city-wide.

At the city's request late in the day, a state Supreme Court judge ordered the patrolmen back on the streets, pending a hearing Monday.

Earlier, sergeants, lieutenants, inspectors, detectives, clerks and plainclothesmen were ordered out into the streets to replace the patrolmen. Leaves were cancelled and overtime ordered.

Mayor John V. Lindsay called the situation serious, but said the safety of the city's 8 million residents was protected. One deputy inspector claimed more patrol cars were on the streets than usual.

The police slowdown sparked scattered wildcat walkouts by cab drivers who said they were fearful of holdups. The cabbies also were impatient at the City Council's slowness to enact higher taxi fares. The drivers won pay raises contingent on the higher fares last month after a 15-day strike.

In another development, a 102-man unit of the city's Housing Authority Police announced a job action similar to that of the patrolmen.

About 200 young patrolmen, chanting "No contract, no work," picketed headquarters of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association demanding it take a stronger stand. The association claims the job action was "genuinely spontaneous." State law prohibits strikes by public employees with heavy fines for unions and union officers calling them.

PBA president Edward Kieran said patrolmen were reporting for duty but three out of four refused to leave the stationhouse except for emergencies. There are 25,000 patrolmen on the 32,000-man force, with about 5,000 on each day shift. The Department won't say how many officers are on duty at any time, or how many are uniformed.

Lindsay refused to discuss the possibility of asking for National Guard troops. No unusual disturbances or outbreaks of crime were reported.

The mayor cancelled an appearance at a birthday memorial service for Martin Luther King Jr., and met with top officials at City Hall.

The slowdown began Thursday evening after the state's highest court reversed a lower court decision awarding patrolmen a $100-a-month pay boost retroactive for 27 months. The high court ordered a trial on the main issue—whether the city had agreed to maintain the pay ratio between sergeants and patrolmen.

U.S. Warplanes Attack Three North Viet Sites

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. warplanes attacked three missile sites in North Vietnam Friday, ranging 80 and 30 miles north of the Demilitarized Zone in strikes the U.S. Command said were based on "the inherent right of self defense."

Air Force fighter-bombers escorted B52 bombers on raids along the Laotian-North Vietnamese border struck at three missile sites after enemy radar began tracking the American flights of aircraft, the U.S. Command said.

The North Vietnamese surface-to-air missile—SAM—sites did not fire on the American planes and there was no damage to the U.S. planes, the Command said. Results of the U.S. attacks were not known.

The strikes, fifth "protective reaction" attacks in the past week, were sure to trigger another protest from North Vietnam.

The Strategic Air Command B52 bombers, each carrying 30 tons of bombs, were on raids against North Vietnamese supply routes running southward through Laos and were being protected by the F105 fighter-bombers.

Spokesmen said that although the North Vietnamese missile sites did not open fire, top-secret electronic gear on the F105s showed that enemy radar had locked on the U.S. flights, a prelude to actual firing.

The F105 Shrike air-to-ground missiles homed in electronically on the impulse from the North Vietnamese radar.

The strikes were carried out 12 miles north of the Mu Gia pass, about 80 miles north of the demilitarized zone, and 9 to 12 miles northeast of the Ban Karai pass, roughly 30 miles north of the DMZ.

Only two days ago, North Vietnamese negotiators at the Paris peace talks charged that the United States was planning new bombardments of North Vietnam.

Sharon Tate Murder Case Goes To Jury

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Seven months after it began, the Sharon Tate murder case went to the jury Friday after a plea from the prosecutor that the seven victims "from their graves cry out for justice."

As the judge finished reading his instructions and bailiffs were being sworn in to guard jurors, Charles Manson shouted from an adjoining room: "Tell them why we couldn't put on a defense, old man."

Superior Court Judge Charles H. Older, ignoring Manson, told the jury at 3:20 p.m. "You shall now retire and select one of your number as foreman to preside over your deliberations."

He said all 12 jurors must agree on a verdict. They were led to a jury room directly above the courtroom.

Manson and his three women codefendants have been listening to the trial from adjoining rooms by loudspeaker, having been ejected for disruptive conduct.

The judge gave 78 instructions, one of which as expected declared the state's star witness an accomplice, requiring her testimony to be corroborated.

The jury sat intently watching the judge through the charge of 1 hour and 5 minutes.

Each juror must make his own decision, the judge said, and not be swayed by the opinions of others. "You are not partisans or advocates but are judges," he said.

The jurors elected Herman Tublik, a mortician, as chairman. They recessed deliberations at 4:30 p.m. local time until Saturday.

Israeli Commandos Raid Base; Lebanese Fire Protest At U.N.

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli commandos staged a hit-run raid on a guerrilla frogman base 28 miles inside Lebanon during the night, and Beirut fired off a protest to the U.N. Security Council Friday.

The attack, near Sarafand harbor 33 miles south of Beirut, was the deepest Israeli penetration into Lebanon since the strike against Beirut's International Airport in December 1968.

AP correspondent Elias Antar reported from Sarafand that an estimated 120 Israeli guerrillas staged the raid in four helicopter. Antar said they blew up two commando strongpoints along the shore, but guerrilla and Lebanese army sources said the raiders were driven off before they reached the main guerrilla base.

About 800 miles to the southwest, Presidents Nikolai V. Podgorny of the Soviet Union and Anwar Sadat of Egypt cut a green ribbon to open the billion dollar Aswan High Dam. Built with Soviet money and technical knowhow, the huge structure will provide Egyptian farmers with year-round irrigation.

Podgorny, in a speech at the ceremonies, declared that Russia firmly supports Arab attempts to recover territory lost to Israel in the June 1967 war.

An Israeli military communiqué said 10 guerrillas were killed and "many more" injured in the strike near Sarafand. It said six Israelis were wounded.

The Palestine guerrilla command said 2 commandos were killed and 7 wounded, against 15 Israelis killed and wounded.

The Lebanese Cabinet met in emergency session to discuss the raid. Later, Deputy Premier Ghassan Tueni said the Beirut government had lodged a protest with the U.N. Security Council but had not requested a meeting. The Lebanese army was placed on alert.

Mark Completion Of Aswan

Sadat, Podgorny Dedicate Dam

ASWAN, Egypt (AP) — The presidents of Egypt and the Soviet Union dedicated the Aswan High Dam Friday on the birth date of Gamal Abdel Nasser, father of the $1 billion project.

Soviet and Egyptian flags fluttered in the bright sunshine as President Anwar Sadat and President Nikolai V. Podgorny cut a green ribbon that symbolized prosperity.

It was the late President Nasser's persistence and Soviet aid that made possible the giant hydroelectric and irrigation dam rearing 364 feet above the bed of the Nile River. Nasser, who would have been 53 years old Friday, died of a heart attack Sept. 28.

At the north wall of the dam,

Sadat and Podgorny unveiled a marble stone inscribed: "To the glorious leader Gamal Abdel Nasser and his struggle for freedom, President Anwar Sadat opened this High Dam on the 15th of January, 1971."

From the dam, Podgorny and Sadat descended to the power station and cut another ribbon. Power from the dam is expected to more than take care of Egypt's industrial needs for the next 10 years.

Podgorny pledged Soviet aid to Egypt in a vast project to reclaim land and to carry electricity to every village in the country.

The Soviet president also lashed out at Israel and the United States and asserted: "A major change in the balance of power is taking place in the Middle East."

He declared that without U.S. military and financial support, Israel "would not have dared to embark on military adventures against the Arab countries."

Podgorny demanded complete Israeli withdrawal from Arab lands occupied in the 1967 war as the way to a durable peace, adding: "The need of the Israeli people for peace is as great as that of the Arab people."

Sadat also took up the Middle East problem in his address, but punctuated it repeatedly with expressions of Egypt's desire for peace.

"We feel we have a commitment to recover our occupied lands, but we also feel we have a commitment for world peace," he said.

Sadat made no mention of the expiration of the Arab-Israeli cease-fire Feb. 5. Instead he repeated that Egypt would welcome a major role by the Big Four of the Soviet Union, the United States, Britain and France in a peaceful solution.

Of the $1 billion in costs, the Russians put up nearly a third and sent 1,800 technicians to help build the dam.

Begun 10 years ago, the High Dam went into almost complete operation last summer after four years of partial operation.

The dam is a great, rock-fill structure that blocks the ancient course of the Nile. A diversion canal leads to six tunnels hewn into a granite mountain and the waters flow through a 12-turbine power station. A great reservoir built up behind the dam is 315 miles long.

The dam's twin purpose is to provide electricity and irrigation. Over the last five years of partial operations, the dam has paid for itself in power and irrigated land, Egyptian officials say.

The waters are turning 1.2 million acres of desert into badly needed farm land. They report, and 650,000 acres turn out two or more crops a year instead of a single crop.

Its power station, eventually to generate, 10 billion kilowatt hours annually, lights villages and provides power for new factories.

It's A Star, It's A Star

For a variety of reasons, Jupiter holds exceptional interest for the lay sky-watcher. Its size and brilliance among lesser points of light make it readily identifiable. Four of its dozen moons can be seen with the aid of only a pair of good field glasses. Jupiter is one of the show pieces of the heavens.

The layman who takes the trouble to read up a bit soon finds that Jupiter is not interesting merely as a spectacle, but in numerous other ways. He learns that this giant of the solar system has more than twice the mass of all the other planets together. Its diameter is 11 times that of the earth, yet it revolves at such speed that its day is slightly under ten hours. A point on Jupiter's equator whizzes at 22,000 miles an hour, compared with 1,000 mph on our planet.

There are many other extraordinary things about this super-planet. To the list one can now add the apparent fact that, alone among the nine major satellites in orbit around our sun, Jupiter is a star rather than a mere planet.

This was first tentatively announced in 1965 by a University of Arizona physicist, Dr. Frank J. Low. Using an instrument he had invented, Low found that Jupiter radiates two and one-half times as much energy as it receives from the sun. Now this discovery has been confirmed by two other astrophysicists, Dr. Robert Wilder of the U.S. Geological Survey in Flagstaff, Ariz., and Dr. Laurence Trafton of McDonald Observatory at the University of Texas.

The conclusion is that the giant planet has some sort of internal energy source. This makes it, by definition, a star. That's a little something additional for the sky-watcher to think about when gazing at splendid Jupiter.

The Three-Day Week

The slow process of contraction that has brought the standard work week down to five eight-hour or seven-hour days is continuing. There are reports, here and there about the country, of firms inaugurating a four-day week. The time may come when this is as much the standard as the five-day week is at present.

There also is a modest ferment under way in behalf of reducing the work week even further. A number of companies — Metropolitan Life and Mutual of New York, for example — have already begun this to a limited degree. In midtown Manhattan, some 500 employees of Metropolitan Life work long shifts three days a week. They put in a 12-hour or 12½-hour day, but have the other four days of the week off.

The companies experimenting with this further truncation of the work week are not basically motivated by a desire to give their employees more leisure time. It has been found that some business can be operated more efficiently—which means with higher profit margins—if the work shifts are longer. Management likes that. It will be intriguing to see whether enough managements like it to make three work days a week a common situation.

The Toll Is Down

The figures are in, now, on traffic deaths during 1970. The salient point is that the total is less than that of the previous year, a highly gratifying departure from an upward trend that had seemed destined to continue forever.

The final compilation of auto fatalities is appalling enough, even so: 55,300 persons were killed—many times the number of Americans who died in Vietnam during the same period. Still, isn't it good to know that this total was 1,100 under that of 1969?

This decrease is especially heartening when one considers that far more miles were driven this year than in 1969. We seem at last to be collecting the first dividend on the investment of concerted safety effort that began in 1966.

Russ Unmanned Probes Sharpen Arguments

Further Cutbacks Urged In Manned Space Flights

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The recent successes of two unmanned Russian moon probes have sharpened the arguments of critics of America's manned space flight program.

The critics proclaim that America, too, should rely more on automatic payloads, and they urge additional cutbacks in manned projects. Congressional opponents of man in space already have sliced deeply into the space agency budget since the Apollo 11 moon landing in July 1969.

They have been aided by several factors: the need to spend money on more earthly problems like pollution, poverty and Vietnam; the abortive Apollo 13 mission which demonstrated the risk to astronauts, and the fact that most Americans believe the Soviet Union no longer is a threat to U.S. superiority in space.

The congressional action, which has trimmed NASA's budget from a peak of $5.9 billion in 1968 to $3.2 billion this year, has resulted in elimination of three Apollo moon landings, a stretchout in other missions and cancellations of some unmanned programs.

That leaves just four more Apollo shots, starting with Apollo 14's scheduled Jan. 31 launching.

In the same period, the number of persons employed in the space program in the United States has dropped from 420,000 to 145,000.

Yet, a Senate attempt in December to delete $110 million from the budget for NASA's next major manned vehicle, the space shuttle, was defeated.

The feeling of the Congressional majority now seems to be: space cuts have been deep enough. Let's ease up for the time being.

However, the $110 million will allow NASA only to move into a study phase on the shuttle, a reusable vehicle intended to ferry men and supplies between earth and a large orbiting space station. Space officials foresee future budget battles similar to those being waged by congressional opponents of the SST, the supersonic transport. They say it will be a fight against the SSS or shuttle space station.

Congress has cut enough funds in the past two years to delay the launching of the shuttle space station from 1975 until 1977 or 1978, perhaps later.

The only other plan for sending man into space before that calls for a small three-man station named Skylab to orbit the earth in 1973. That could mean a gap of four or more years in manned space flight.

Manned flight proponents fear this will enable the Russians, who have declared they will orbit the first large station, to overtake the U.S. lead in space.

Most opponents of manned flights feel this argument is flag-waving and propaganda intended to influence Congress to loosen the purse strings. They feel the United States can maintain an on-going space program and a lead over Russia with an annual budget around $3 billion.

Scientists generally have decried the cuts in the space program. However, congressional opponents of the shuttle have enlisted two eminent scientists for their cause.

They are Dr. James A. Van Allen of the University of Iowa, whose instrument aboard America's first satellite discovered the Van Allen radiation belts, and Dr. Thomas Gold of Cornell University, who also heads President Nixon's space science panel.

"The manned space program, it seems to me, has had its day," Gold said.

Van Allen said: "I am totally unpersuaded that men in a spacecraft are important or even useful in any way that is commensurate with the effort required to maintain them there. It increases the cost of a given mission and risks human life unnecessarily."

The Iowa physicist said future space flights "should be launched for purely scientific objectives" and recommended two central objectives for the space program of the 1970s.

"First," he said, "the fullest economically feasible exploitation of our space capabilities for useful applications in rapid and efficient communications, in aviation, and in the analysis and forecast of the dynamics of the world's weather and in terrestrial reconnaissance and survey in the broadest sense."

"Second, the enlargement and extension of scientific knowledge and human perception of the larger physical universe."

"If one or more men in the spacecraft is the cost-effective technique for conducting any one of these missions, let it be done in that mode," Van Allen said. "But if, as I anticipate, this is not the case, let us not grieve nor devote ourselves to the invention of specious and insane reasons to the contrary. Rather let us get on with our two basic objectives in the most sensible and rational framework that we can devise."

Law For Today

Q. Why don't companies who make eye glasses advertise their prices so people living on a limited budget can know where to go to get inexpensive glasses?

A. Illinois law says persons or firms who examine eyes or fill prescriptions for eye glasses or contact lenses may not advertise, either directly or indirectly, their prices or cost of services. Violators of this law are subject to a fine up to $500, a prison term of not more than six months, or both.

The Global View

Power Struggle Dominates Kremlin

By LEON DENNEN
NEW YORK (NEA)—The big question about Russia troubling the Nixon administration at the beginning of 1971 is how long the Brezhnev-Kosygin team will survive in Moscow.

In the President's view, an understanding between the United States and the Soviet Union is the key to detente in the Middle East, Indochina and Europe.

But will the men likely to succeed Communist party chief Leonid Brezhnev and Premier Kosygin pursue a "softer" or "harder" policy in international affairs? Will they agree, among other things, to a realistic solution of the thorny West Berlin problem?

No one knows the answer. However, one thing is certain: A struggle for power among the Kremlin's "collective leaders" was brewing throughout 1970.

They are now engaged in a grand debate about domestic and foreign policy which will culminate in the 24th Communist party congress in March. So far none of the big controversial questions has been settled.

As the party's secretary, Brezhnev still wields enormous power. He postponed the congress twice in order to consolidate his position. This gave him time to replace potential opponents in key jobs with loyal men.

He is also believed to have the backing of the older army generals who, as an East European diplomat said, "were brought up on horse power."

But the "sclerosis" of Brezhnev's mediocre leadership has been condemned by younger members of the all-powerful Politburo, including Aleksandr Sholepov and Kiril Mazurov. They, in turn, reportedly have the support of the younger "missing generals" who undoubtedly represent the best scientific brains in Russia today.

Like the nuclear physicist Andrei Sakharov and other dissident scientists and writers, the "missile generals" ostensibly have more progressive thoughts on economic and political problems.

The Red army, which could have a decisive voice in the choice of new leaders, is thus itself divided.

The aging and ailing Premier Kosygin seems to have ruled himself out as supreme "vozhd" (leader) in the Kremlin. But Brezhnev is fighting hard to stay on top.

Economic difficulties and the disarray in the Red world are some of the key issues on which power struggle revolves.

Brezhnev is currently trying to convince Russians that he is doing everything possible to improve their standard of living. But despite his optimistic propaganda the country continues to be plagued by drastic shortages of consumer goods ranging from meat to housing.

An exceptionally high labor turnover is disrupting production plans in many branches of Soviet industry.

The majority of the "rolling stones" are better-educated young workers disillusioned by the limited opportunities open to them. They are euphemistically termed "overheated atoms of society" by worried Kremlin bureaucrats.

At the same time, Moscow's prestige in the Communist world reached an all-time low after the Red army's invasion of Czechoslovakia in 1968. The recent strikes and riots in Poland which led to the fall of Russia's puppet, Wladyslaw Gomulka, were another nail in Brezhnev's political coffin.

Since he ousted Premier Khrushchev in 1966 Moscow's ability to control Communist parties beyond the reach of the Red army has virtually disappeared.

Partial normalization of Russian-Chinese diplomatic relations has temporarily eased tension along their common frontier in the Far East. But Moscow and Peking are still contending for world Communist leadership in Lenin's name. Chances of a lasting settlement between the two Red giants appear as remote as ever.

Ann Landers:

Widow Desperate For Someone To Talk To

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 50-year-old widow with two married children and three grandsons. I am writing to you because I am alone and desperate for someone to talk to.

Yes, I have a long list of friends—most of them the same friends I've had for 35 years. I grew up in this town. I have plenty of relatives, too. But an extra woman is excess baggage these days. It's the extra man everyone is looking for. Lately I've been thinking some terrible thoughts. I find myself wishing some of my snug, happily married women friends would outlive their husbands by just one year so they'd have some understanding of what it's like to be a widow.

Yesterday I decided I couldn't bear another Saturday night alone so I decided to invite a few couples to my home for dinner. Here are the responses.

First Couple: "Sorry, we are going up north in our camper. But please try us again."

Second Couple: "My husband is on a special diet. He can't have salt. If we came for dinner you'd have to cook special for him. Then I'd have to invite you back. I don't use salt at all. That means I'd have to cook special for you. Bla, bla, bla."

Third Couple: The husband answered, "I don't enjoy going anywhere with my wife, but I'd like to come over and have coffee with you Sunday morning while she's in church. Please don't mention this to her. She wouldn't understand."

Fourth Couple: "My husband is drinking again. If you have us to dinner you'll serve cocktails and he'll be drunk the whole weekend. I can't take the chance."

So, Ann Landers, I put the beautiful steaks back in the freezer and decided to fry an egg and watch TV. And now, as I sit here looking at the four walls, the warm, friendly words I heard so often after my husband's funeral are still ringing in my ears: "If there is anything we can do for you just let us know."

Let 'em know, will you, Ann?

—Solo

Dear Solo: You did. And I thank you.

Dear Ann Landers: Two months ago our little girl died of a heart defect. She was only a few weeks old so we didn't have much time to love her. Many of our friends have small babies. Since we lost our wee angel we have not been invited anywhere. I could not understand why we were suddenly cut off. My cousin told me yesterday and I am in a state of shock.

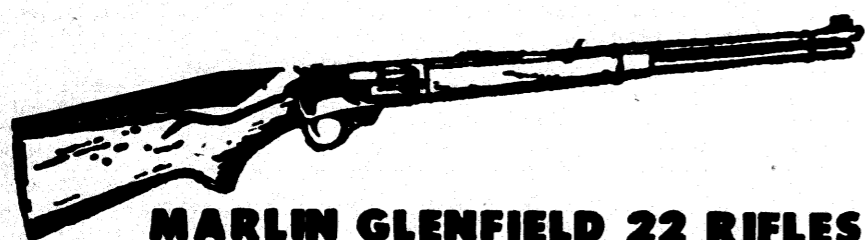

It seems our friends all have babies. They are afraid we will be reminded of our tragedy and the wounds will be re-opened if we see how happy they are with their little ones so they don't invite us. Please, Ann, tell everyone who has this mistaken notion that they are not doing us a kindness. In fact, just the opposite is true. We have lost our child and we have accepted the loss as part of our lot. Now we are lonesome and we want to be around our friends. Thank you. —Billings, Montana

Dear Billings: Here is your letter and I hope your friends see it and include you once again. Thanks for writing. A letter such as yours can help to educate millions.

Use Saline Solution To Set Dye Colors

By POLLY CRAMER
DEAR POLLY—I suggest that Jean set the colors in articles she dyes by soaking them in a salt solution that covers the garment. I add about a handful of salt and dissolve it before putting the garment in. I leave mine for about half an hour. My mother used this method to set colors in garments before they were washed the first time. Rinse well after such a soaking.

—JUANITA
DEAR POLLY—I want to help Jean with setting the colors in clothes she dyes. She will find that putting a cup of vinegar in two gallons of water and then adding the dyed articles will set the colors. Rinse with clear water until there is no trace of color in the water. I find this works very well.

—MARILYN

DEAR GIRLS—My mother,

like Juanita's, always set colors with a salt-water solution and she dyed many things very successfully. Two of the most popular brands of dye on the market have the statement on the front of their boxes that the dye mixture contains salt. If all the color runs out of Jean's dyed clothes, I feel she is not following the directions carefully. Follow them to the letter and no cheating on the time. There is a difference between a hot dye bath and a tinting job.

"You are on the National Laws Commission," said our old friend, the unlucky expert. "You have abolished honors in duplicate play. When are you going to get rid of this anachronism in rubber bridge?"

The answer to that question is that honors will probably remain in rubber bridge forever. North America might want to eliminate them but somehow or other we don't believe that Europe will ever go along.

Now let's look at the hand that caused his latest outburst. He sat North and would have had no trouble making his no-trump game with at least one overtrick.

Playing at four hearts, South lost no time going one down when West opened his singleton spade. East took ace and returned the queen. South played his king. West ruffed and led back the 10 of diamonds whereupon South had no way to keep East from scoring tricks with the king of diamonds and another high spade.

Do you see how South could have made his contract in spite of the defense? It wouldn't have been at all difficult. He should have let East's queen of spades hold the second trick. East would have been unable to do anything better than to lead another spade.

West would still ruff South's king and still shift to the 10 of diamonds, but it would not have done him any good.

South would have gone right up with dummy's ace. Then he would lead another spade and ruff it high. After that it would have been easy to draw trumps, enter dummy with the king of clubs and discard the queen of diamonds on the fifth spade.

Russia Differs With Americans On Moon Rocks

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—A Soviet scientist said Thursday that moon rocks gathered by an unmanned Russian spacecraft are almost identical to the Apollo lunar samples. But his conclusions from the data were radically different from those of American scientists.

In a paper prepared for the second annual Lunar Science Conference, Dr. A. P. Vinogradov, vice president of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, said the Russian moon rocks and samples from the Apollo 11 and Apollo 12 missions are "surprisingly similar."

Dr. Vinogradov, however, said the rocks showed evidence of explosive volcanism, and that meteorites hitting the moon cause lunar material to fall on the earth. Most American scientists disagree.

The Soviet moon rocks were gathered from the lunar Sea of Fertility, a site hundreds of miles north of the Apollo 11 and Apollo 12 landing sites. Apollo 11 landed on the Sea of Tranquility and Apollo 12 landed on the Ocean of Storms. All three sites are flat lunar plains.

The unmanned Soviet craft, Luna 16, landed on the moon last Sept. 20, gathered the sample in an automatic drill, and then launched itself off the moon to land four days later in the Soviet Union.

Dr. Vinogradov's paper was the first detailed report released on studies of the sample.

The Soviet scientist said the spacecraft gathered 101 grams in a core tube which was drilled about 13 inches into the lunar soil. The soil was then sealed into a helium chamber for the trip to earth.

"The material from all three seas," said Dr. Vinogradov, "is surprisingly similar in its petrological, mineralogical and chemical composition."

THE MORNING-AFTER feeling seems to have this bloodhound down. Perhaps he needs something to clear those sinus cavities.

Mood Of Human Race Matches Color Of Gray-Clad Skies

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — These are the days when a man wishes he could dig himself a hole and hibernate like a bear or a groundhog.

There really isn't much point in being above ground from now until April. All a fellow would miss is a few snowfalls, a common cold or two, and some twinges of arthritis and the rheumatism.

Man is simply not fit society for himself at this season of the year. His temper is worn threadbare; his heart is a red icicle; the blood in his veins flows like clattered milk.

Yes, the world is a vast yawn. Everyone wants to resign from the rat race and become a beachcomber. There are a lot of stirring things worth doing, but no one feels like getting them done.

Husband is grouchy, housewife is touchy, the children are surly, nature is sullen. The mood of the human race matches the color of the gray-clad sky. Everyone acts as if he were on the way to a funeral, and looks as somber-faced as if it were his own.

It seems like it is always either snowing or raining—or getting ready to do both. The leaky-footed weather goes on grim day after grim day after grim day. The sun, when it does peek forth from a mantle of clouds, shines as bleakly as a miser's grin. At night the wind whines and scratches at the door like an unfed dog.

The postman comes in bearing a post card which is soon thumbtacked on the office bulletin board. The post card is from Florida. It says:

"Hi gang! — Hope all you boys and girls are keeping on your toes. Having a wonderful time here, but miss you all like the devil. Went

In Hollywood

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
TARZANA, Calif. (AP) — Last week the Encino-Tarzana branch of the Los Angeles Public Library was the scene of an unusual ceremony.

The complete works of Edgar Rice Burroughs were presented to the library by the author's heirs. To mark the occasion, the 1932 "Tarzan, the Ape Man," starring Johnny Weissmuller and Maureen O'Sullivan, was screened.

Said librarian Joyce Burgin: "This gift not only gives us an extensive collection of works by the man who gave Tarzana his name, but will also meet the growing demand for Burroughs' writing."

To Robert Hodes, general manager of Edgar Rice Burroughs, Inc., the event had deeper significance.

"This is the first time," he remarked, "that a library system has recognized the value of Burroughs' works."

Always before, he said, the books had been dismissed for "no literary value." For that reason, the Los Angeles library system had banned Burroughs from the shelves until last year.

Other libraries may have had another reason. In 1961, the Downey, Calif., school district banned Tarzan books because of lack of evidence that "Tarzan and his mate Jane were married before they took up house-keeping in the treetops."

"Not true," insisted Hodes in his Tarzana headquarters, once the working place for author Burroughs.

Hodes explained that Tarzan and Jane had parted in the first volume, "Tarzan of the Apes." But the demand of his publisher and the public prompted him to reunite the pair in "The Return of Tarzan." Hodes quoted from page 363 of the second book: "They were married by Jane's father, an ordained minister."

Hodes seems oddly cast as keeper of the Burroughs traditions. He wears mod clothes, a love-symbol necklace and full beard. He admits having never read a Tarzan book and scarcely knowing the name Edgar Rice Burroughs before he became attorney for the enterprises in 1962.

Later, he was placed in charge by Hulbert Burroughs, son of the author, who bought a ranch in this San Fernando valley suburb in 1919 and died in 1950.

Los Angeles Farmer Market Favorite Place For Tourists

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It sits midway between the hippie haunts of the Sunset Strip and Wilshire Boulevard's culturally chic museums—the Farmers' Market, monument to the stomach.

Food is its hallmark, but the Farmers Market sells everything from souvenirs and stationary to parakeets and poinsettias.

Garden shops, pet shops, clothing stores and crockery stands are jammed into the complex of one-story buildings clustered around an always-crowded parking lot. A white, early-American style steeple rises above the square to mark the spot for passing motorists.

Today's Farmers' Market is sophisticated compared to the primitive clapboard stalls where real farmers hawked their wares on opening day in 1934. There were 18 stalls then, specializing in eggs and produce, and the market clung to the city's edge.

The urban sprawl sprang up around it, and the market spread to its current 160 stalls which include such modern additions as a post office, car wash, beauty salons and a brokerage company with stock prices flashing on a big board.

Local residents brave the tourist crush to buy fine meats and cheeses. And alert tourists often spot celebrities snacking at the umbrella-shaded patio tables. There's a television studio next door, and the stars like to lunch here.

study class were made.

Mrs. M. D. Goldsborough led the program, "Community Commitment, Risks In A New Style of Ministry," assisted by Mrs. Harold Oakes, Mrs. Donald Merris and Mrs. Watson. A discussion followed.

During the social hour delicious refreshments were served by the hostesses.

"Cheer Card Lady" Receives 1,200 Pieces Mail Annually

HONOLULU (AP) — Mrs. Henry Espersen exchanges recipes with the President's wife, didn't go blind after all. But she continued to write.

Today she pens between six and nine letters a day and receives 1,200 cards and letters a year. Mrs. Espersen spends about $100 a year on postage alone. She has never met most of her correspondents, nor has any plans to meet them.

Many of the people she writes to are not famous. Their names crop up in newspaper stories—people who are ill, who are in accidents or whom Mrs. Espersen feels should be congratulated or cheered up.

Her correspondence with the Nixon family began when she wrote to Mrs. Hannah Nixon to congratulate her on her son's election as a U.S. senator from California. Now she writes to Pat Nixon, who recently sent her a recipe for apricot nut bread.

A happy birthday card to Princess Grace of Monaco a few years ago brings her an annual note along with a picture of the royal family.

Among her albums of letters is one stuffed with mail from the Apollo astronauts. "They're my boyfriends," says Mrs. Espersen.

Richard Nixon, Arthur Godfrey, Mayor Richard Daley and Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., are among those who have answered Mrs. Espersen's letters within a week or so.

"The whole trick in keeping up a correspondence is to answer your mail promptly," she said.

Especially for gardeners and particularly for those who like to grow roses is the 1971 version of the popular Hallmark Garden Almanac calendar.

The all-new almanac—$3.50, printed in color, was prepared in cooperation with the New York Botanical Garden. Now in its third year, it contains a jangling appointment calendar with color sketches of flowers, herbs, birds and insects and space for writing daily notes.

A revolving fingertip dial on the inside cover contains a description, height, color sketch and other details of 16 kinds of roses. There are instructions for planting, pruning and winter care of roses.

Other features include instructions for growing a fruit seed garden, making a wren house, preparing a bottle garden, planting a window box, preparing rose-petal sachets, and other useful advice for gardeners.

The almanac is 14 by 12 1/2 inches and has pre-cut holes on the facing cover to facilitate hanging on the wall of a den, kitchen or garden shed.

NEWS ADVENTURE SERIES VISITS PENGUIN CITY

One of the most unusual "cities" in the world, where some 300,000 penguins live in a perpetual struggle to survive in the Antarctic, will be visited on "Penguin City," a CBS News Adventure to be broadcast Wednesday, Jan. 20, (6:30-7:30 p.m.) in color on the CBS Television Network.

CBS News Correspondent Charles Kuralt will be the reporter on this trip to "Penguin City," located at Cape Crozier, a thousand miles from the South Pole.

This episode, the second in a series of one-hour Adventure broadcasts to be seen on the Network during the coming months, will look at the work of Dr. William Sladen, a Johns Hopkins University ecologist who has spent eight years in Antarctica studying the Adeline penguins in their dramatic life-and-death struggle. The remarkable spring and fall migration of hundreds of thousands of penguins, and the birth and first splash of independence of the young chicks will be seen.

EPIC WAR STORY TO BE BROADCAST IN TWO PARTS

"Battle of the Bulge," powerful action-packed drama of World War II, with Henry Fonda, Robert Shaw, Robert Ryan, Dana Andrews, Pier Angeli and Barbara Werle in starring roles, will be a two-part presentation on "The CBS Thursday Night Movies," Thursday, Jan. 21, and on "The CBS Friday Night Movies," Friday, Jan. 22, (8-10 p.m. both nights) in color on the CBS Television Network. George Montgomery, Ty Hardin, Charles Bronson, Hans Christian Blech, Werner Peters, James MacArthur and Telly Savalas appear in co-starring roles.

"Battle of the Bulge" is a dramatic version of one of the epic moments of World War II when the Allies were faced with a surprise German breakthrough of such ferocity that it could easily have turned the tides of the war and of history.

Henry Fonda plays tough Lieutenant Colonel Kiley, who suspects an enemy attack even when an Allied victory seems assured. Robert Ryan is seen in the role of General Grey, who leads his forces in retreat but stops long enough in a delaying action to pit his comparatively weak Sherman tanks against the Nazi panzers. Robert Shaw, one of England's most distinguished actors, appears as the tightly disciplined German commander determined to mow down the American forces. Dana Andrews, as a U.S. Army colonel, ridicules the probability of a surprise German attack and finds it hard to believe that it has occurred, even when the action explodes in unprecedented fury.

GUESTS ON "INTERNS"

Peter Haskell, star of "Bracken's World," has been cast as a heart attack victim and Meredith MacRae as his pregnant wife in a future episode of "The Interns," Friday night drama on the CBS Television Network.

OLDEST MEMBER

TORONTO (AP) — Christina Cardoni recently received a certificate from Pope Paul VI to mark her 100th birthday. Mrs. Cardoni, a great-grandmother, immigrated to Canada from Italy when she was 84. She is believed the oldest member of Toronto's Italian community. She credits daily doses of brandy and whisky for her longevity.

Oil Rulers Seem Anxious For Peace, Stability

By The Associated Press

Middle East politics and the maze of world oil economies have combined to produce a picture that seems to frighten oil rulers and make them anxious to see peace and stability established in their now volatile area.

If so, some sort of Israeli-Arab settlement would likely be relatively near, and with it a global realization that the world energy picture has changed radically and forever.

One outstanding American expert says the United States and Western Europe were lucky the oil crisis hit now, because had it come two years later, at a time when the demand would have been substantially higher, it could have produced economic panic.

As matters stand now, he adds, the United States will be forced to reach self-sufficiency in energy, probably within a decade or less. Oddly, Saudi Arabia and Iran, the biggest Middle East producers, would be first to cheer such a development.

A complicated story lies behind that assumption. If the United States was the prime target for punishment by the Arab boycott, why did the Saudi oil minister spend so much time in Washington last month talking to U.S. leaders? Why did he say publicly his country would be "more than happy" to find justification for a return to normal business relations?

Why did the Shah of Iran recently urge the Western world to concentrate on developing alternatives to oil for energy?

Behind such things was a suggestion of scare over the long-range possibility that a situation the rulers themselves brought about could react disastrously against them.

It may be that the Arab-Israel negotiations will prove less important than what's going on among the Americans, West Europeans, Japanese, Saudis and Iranians.

Faisal, the Saudi king, was responsible for unified Arab use of oil as a weapon against Israel's friends. He now holds the key to the future.

The American expert says Faisal is of a mind to "sit down, be more friendly and talk peace and business."

The expert, for 20 years a top-ranking expert on Middle East and world oil affairs — he asked to be otherwise unidentified — elaborated on his view in an interview in this way:

Middle East production cutbacks, embargoes and price hikes hurt Europe and Japan far more than the United States, since they were much more dependent: Europe 62 per cent on the Middle East, Japan 80 per cent. The actions of the two biggest Middle East producers threatened to put the whole advanced world in the same dangerous economic boat. Wars had been fought for less cause.

Yet neither the Saudi king nor the Iran shah could be comfortable isolated from the Western friends whose support had kept them in power. They would be subject not only to Communist world pressures, but to those from radicals of their own countries.

They didn't want their Western friends badly damaged economically for other reasons, too. But if they didn't, they'd have no choice but to release their crude.

West European and Japanese demand for oil combined had reached 19 million barrels a day. Their rates of economic growth suggest increases of at least 10 per cent annually in energy needs.

Even if Saudi Arabia increases production to 20 million barrels a day by 1980 and Iran to its probable peak of nine million, the total increase by the two would be far outdistanced by the increased needs of Japan and West Europe alone.

It follows that the Saudis and Iranians would be far from eager for increased demands from the United States, too. Moreover, the producing countries want further industrialization and thus are going to need more and more of their own oil.

The shah, getting the biggest price for crude in history, sees a time when he won't want to sell all that much.

Editorial Comment Thoughts Prompted By Kohoutek

The only trouble with the "comet of the century" was that they forgot to specify which century.

The sad news for all of us who had hoped to get a look at our very first real, live, naked-eye comet is that seldom in the annals of astronomy have so many become so excited for so little reason.

At a time when Kohoutek was supposed to be at its most spectacular, even astronomers with high-powered telescopes are having trouble locating it as it begins receding into the vast outer reaches of the solar system where comets dwell. They say it began its journey 75,000 years ago. One might well ask, "Was this trip necessary?"

A book now on the newsstands proclaims on its cover that "The world's most spectacular new comet has arrived! Is it a messenger of doom from outer space or a scientific clue to the birth of our universe?"

You don't have to read the book to know that Kohoutek is both of these things. The only trouble with the messenger part is that, as noted above, the time element is a little hazy. Those members of the Children of God who carried signs in front of the United Nations announcing the end of the world coincident with Kohoutek's arrival weren't wrong, just premature.

For the cometologists, Kohoutek was indeed a notable event. It was probably the best-studied comet of all time, and certainly the first one to be directly observed and photographed in space itself, by the astronauts aboard Skylab 3.

As far as the rest of us are concerned, however, we will have to wait until 1986 for a comet worth getting up from the television set and stepping outside to see. This is when Halley's comet is due to return, and it has been a faithful crowd-pleaser since at least a couple centuries B.C. (although back then they didn't know it belonged to Mr. Halley).

But speaking of modern and ancient forms of entertainment, this business about Kohoutek reminds us how very, very distant we are psychologically from our early ancestors.

For those who have never seen a comet and probably never will, it is hard to believe that kings once trembled when one was sighted. Those whose knowledge of the stars is limited to picking out the Big Dipper find it difficult to understand how the ancients could have peopled the firmament with the figures of gods and animals.

Ancient man was much closer to the sky than we, who have made it just another highway for our machines.

If the Christmas Star were to appear again, how many of us would be "abiding in the fields" and see it? Even if we saw it, how many of us would have the wisdom to follow it?

Supplementary Power Source

Discussions of the energy crisis often elicit the view that in the short run it is unrealistic to talk of alternatives to fossil fuels. What the situation demands, so exponents of the conventional wisdom tell us, is more oil in a hurry; it would take too long for anything else to make a dent in energy needs.

This is rather like saying that small energy-saving measures don't count — that only massive cutbacks will do the job. The fact is that a key element in successfully dealing with the energy crisis in the immediate future is to apply the philosophy that every little bit helps. By the same token, every increment of energy from hitherto untapped sources will help to ease the pressure on available supplies of oil.

Power from the wind is a case in point. No one expects that generators operated by windmills can be counted on to supply a big percentage of our electric power needs in the next few years. But sophisticated wind machines could supply appreciable amounts of electricity within a short time.

As long ago as 1942 there were reports of a two-blade windmill in Vermont capable of operating an electric generator which delivered 1,000 kilowatts. A grid linking several hundred improved versions of such a windmill could furnish significant amounts of supplementary power in some regions. The technology for this is available. What is required is the will to put that technology to work.

Jacksonville Monday began digging out of 12 inches of snow brought by Sunday's blizzard, said to be the worst since the "big one of 1939." Many motorists were trapped on the highways, but most of them found haven in towns and farm homes along the route.

Walter Neil Bohlen, a Concordia Theological Seminary student, was found dead in his snowbound automobile near Ashland Monday afternoon by state highway snowplow operators, assisted by a Springfield National Guard unit called out on emergency duty. Ann Landers:

Take It From 'Old Lady' It's All In The Head

Dear Ann Landers: I have read with amusement the letters in your column from women who seem to be in perpetual search for sexual ecstasy. Take it from an old lady who is past 60 — it's all in the head.

Recently I was involved in a minor accident. While the insurance adjuster, a handsome young man in his 30s, was writing out the claim, I felt a sudden surge of passion. (I had a hysterectomy 10 years ago!) Had I been 30 years younger I'm sure I'd have made a pass at the young man. So you see, Ann, where sex is concerned, there's a very thin line between reality and fantasy. — Gutted But Not Dead

Dear Not Dead: There's a great deal of fantasy connected with sexual desire, in fact, lust is loaded with it! This doesn't mean you were imagining those feelings. A woman in her 60s can be far from sexually dead — "gutted" or not — and your experience proved it!

Dear Ann Landers: Why do people have such dirty minds? I refer to that mealy-mouthed gossip who noticed that a certain girl in the office always wears the same outfit on Thursday that she wore on Wednesday. The cat observed: "Her dress is usually pretty wrinkled — and her hair is a mess." She concluded that the girl has a steady arrangement and doesn't sleep home on Wednesday night.

That letter made me furious because last Wednesday night I went directly from work to a friend's house following a frantic phone call. Her husband is overseas and her labor pains had started. The poor kid has no relatives in town and I am her only close friend. When I arrived, the taxi had already been called to take her to the hospital. She was waiting for me with instructions on what to do for the two pre-schoolers.

Her two-year-old had a terrible cold. I slept on the couch and held that child in my arms all night. The following morning the woman next door took the kids and I went to work looking like I had lost a rassing match with two gorillas.

Sorry I couldn't have turned up looking fresh as a daisy in order to protect my reputation, but these are the facts, Ma'm. — Nuts to the Gossips

Dear N.T.G.: Let's hear it for a Good Samaritan with wrinkled clothes and messed-up hair. Thanks for writing!

Dear Ann Landers: You advised mothers to teach their daughters to sew, cook, fix hems and make beds. You then went on to suggest that fathers teach their sons to be "fixers" of whatever might break in the house.

Where have you been these last ten years, Annie? Don't you know that His and Her duties are things of the past? Men should know how to sew and cook and make beds and women should be able to fix faucets, repair appliances, change tires and repair whatever breaks.

Assigning certain jobs to certain sexes is unfair, unpleasant and impractical. We share the work at our house. But how much easier it would be for both of us if, when we attended school, Home Ec

Haig is no Haldeman

WASHINGTON (NEA)

It doesn't say enough to assert that aide Alexander Haig gets less access to President Nixon than some White House watchers have imagined.

This is not really new, but informed sources stress again that Haig is not and never has been the kind of "managerial" aide that H.R. Haldeman was — with the co-equal support of former aide John Ehrlichman in many important ways.

(In this capital, incidentally, the circuit still buzzes with the notion that Haldeman continues indirectly to advise Mr. Nixon via calls to Ronald Ziegler and others.)

Ziegler, of course, acknowledged limited telephone contact. But if, as some observers of the President's establishment think, Haldeman still quietly serves today, it is at more than physical distance and thus may be severely restricted in value.

Naturally he can't issue orders to men in high station. If either Ziegler or any other Haldeman "transmitter" tries to effectuate the former chief of staff's suggestions or recommendations, casting real weight should be difficult. One source tells me he doubts Ziegler could even get through to at least one department head he knows.

However, this may be, this source thinks Mr. Nixon from an early time on allowed himself to be "crippled" by excessive dependence on the Haldeman-Ehrlichman team.

They offered him a blend of services — executing orders, managing and organizing activities, feeding in ideas from other sources — which the President plainly accepted as being performed with high competence.

They were able to do this while always avoiding the kind of tough criticism, of hard interchange, which the President inescapably equates with disloyalty. This aspect is what distinguishes them from such advertised consultative aides as Melvin Laird and, briefly, John Connally. The Haldeman-Ehrlichman manner of command, striking fear widely, made them effective as Haig is not.

Their makeup and their blend of service plus intense loyalty fit the President to perfection. He, through such heavy dependency upon them for so many things, was left free to pursue the foreign affairs functions of his job which he considers not only his special realm but the key to greatness in any president's performance.

Yet the widening judgment here is that Mr. Nixon has consistently misread both the history and the nature of the presidency, that he has given away too much in not being his own man in broader areas than foreign affairs.

Shrewdly, Haldeman and Ehrlichman made Richard Nixon, his welfare and his wishes (as they read them) their sole "project."

By that fact, largely conceded in their public utterance, they became his cripples. But it takes two to tango. He let them cripple him. In his very narrow concept of the presidency, he wanted dependency upon them in large reaches of domestic affairs — obviously not excluding politics.

Personal caretakers, men who make a president or anyone else their all-consuming "project," are clearly not easy to come by. The mix of skills required is rare.

That's why Haig doesn't measure up, and why it's plausible to believe Haldeman continues — at one remove — to take a hand. But the inevitable handicaps in the present setup also explain why things are not moving smoothly in the White House.

From Mr. Nixon's view, one of the worst consequences of Watergate is that, forcing the Haldeman-Ehrlichman resignations, it exposes his self-imposed crippling — and the damage that may inflict upon the whole nation through an aftermath of fumbling.

Guide Lines
The United States Capitol's professional guide system stems from the Philadelphia Centennial Exposition of 1876. Near chaos occurred when hordes of sightseers moved on to Washington, prompting Congress to appoint guides to organize the crowds while describing the Capitol's wonders.

Bluffs Club Sees Microwave Oven Perform

BLUFFS — The January meeting of the Bluffs Woman's Club featured a cooking school, Adventures in Food, with Miss Julie Steele, Home Economist for CIPS, conducting the school.

Twenty-four members enjoyed watching the foods prepared and cooked in a Microwave oven, courtesy of Lindsay's of Versailles.

Miss Steele talked about the use of the oven and how to adapt the recipes to a conventional range. The foods prepared were awarded the guests and one, a dip, was served the club. All questions were answered.

The president, Mrs. Floyd Hart, welcomed the members. The meeting opened with singing the club collect, with Mrs. Paul Vannier leader. Mrs. Ruth Main led the pledge of allegiance and the prayer was given by Mrs. Guss Andres.

Reports of the secretary and treasurer were heard and a thank-you from Mrs. Hayden Walker for a book placed in the Bluffs Library, in memory of her husband.

Mrs. Hart gave a short report of the District 20, IFWC, board meeting and announced A Day in Court will be held in Jacksonville Monday, January 21. Several plan to attend.

The nominating committee was elected to report at the February meeting. Included are Mrs. Floyd Hart, Mrs. Charles Hatfield, Mrs. Joseph Evan, Mrs. John Pine and Mrs. William Chambers.

The February meeting will be Way Back When! under the direction of Mrs. I. D. Mueller. She asks all members bring a baby picture and short unsigned clue to their identity. A Valentine exchange will be held. Hostesses will be Mrs. Herbert Boes, Mrs. John Pine, Mrs. Charles Hatfield, Mrs. Floyd Hart and Mrs. Alice Biddle.

The Bluffs Civic Club Ladies Night will be Monday, January 14, at Trinity Lutheran Church. Ladies of the club are urged to take their husbands to this meeting. Reservations were due Jan. 11.

Vortman was unable to attend.

Welfare New?

The ancient Incas had well-organized welfare programs. Orphans, the aged and the sick drew generous food supplies from government storehouses.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Help needed for special cleanup

By Polly Cramer

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — I have a hand crocheted bedspread with fringe around that my mother made about 35 years ago and it is soiled. I do not know how to go about washing this spread or should it be cleaned? I also need to clean the greasy household grime on my hanging lamp chains but nothing seems to work. Any ideas? — MERALEE.

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve concerns the lack of large coat hangers to be bought for giving support to men's lightweight jackets and shirts so as to eliminate that droop or sag over the shoulders midway between the collar and shoulder seam. — MISS C.

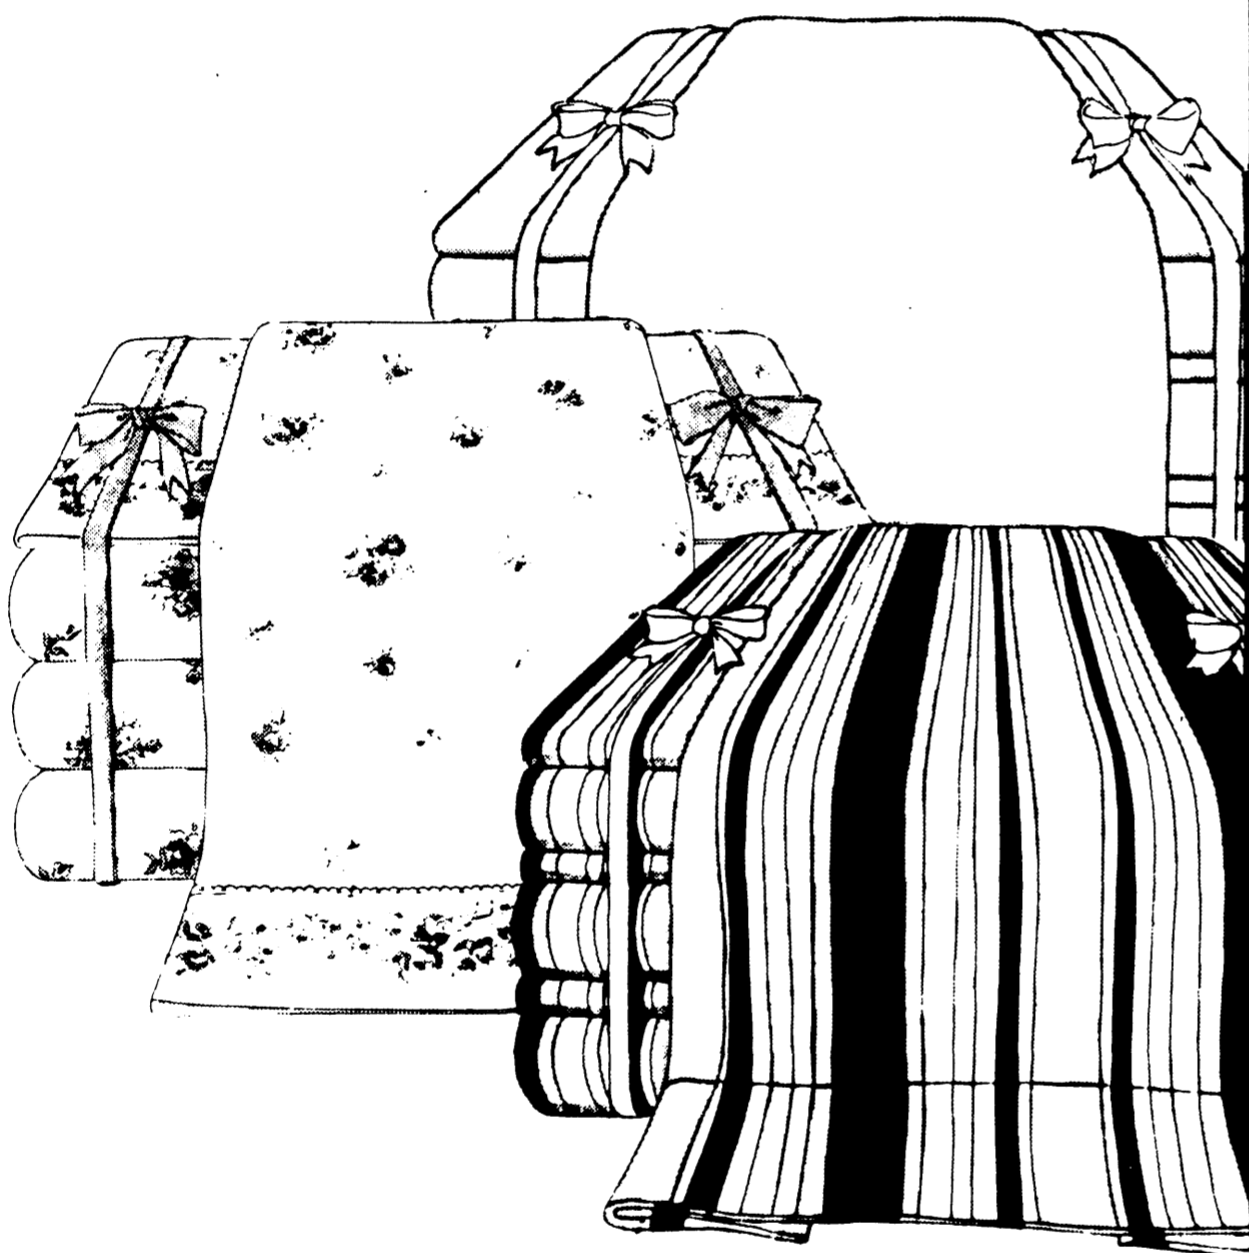

DEAR POLLY — Loretta wanted to know how to renovate an old ornate gilt frame and I have had some success with the following method. Brush clean, wash if necessary. Mix a small amount of patching plaster to a thick consistency. Using a toothpick, old knitting needle or something similar fill in the chipped or missing pieces. When dry lightly spray several times with a gold spray bomb. — R.N.

DEAR GIRLS — A representative of the paint industry recommends the following way to refinish a gilt frame. "Sand with very fine sandpaper and then apply a high grade gold size. When size is partially dry, but tacky, apply the best quality gold bronze. Dust it on and wipe off the surplus with a soft wad of cotton. After allowing this to dry for several days finish with a thin coat of pure white shellac that is thinned considerably with denatured alcohol. This should keep it from tarnishing for several years. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — During the cold weather it seems that every other week we are buying new mittens for our little girls, ages seven and eight and all because they have lost just one mitten of a pair. This year we seem to have solved the problem as I bought four pairs of mittens ALL ALIKE and when one gets lost it can be matched up with one from another pair. — PAT.

DEAR POLLY — Make a child-size settee by removing one side of a crib and then using the spare side by hanging it up, with hooks, to a wall horizontally to use as a shelf for ironed linens. Of course, remove all hardware. The crib mattress can be covered with printed material that will look well with the rest of the room's decorations. — MRS. R.S.

Boyle's Conclusions

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — Jumping to conclusions:

No more than one out of 10 American husbands knows the size of dress his wife wears. At least one out of five husbands can't name for certain his own shoe size or the length of his shirt sleeves.

No matter how much you may respect a man's ability as a raconteur, it begins to diminish if you meet him at more than three cocktail parties in a month.

One of the hardest of all things for a man to do is to win a deserved reputation as both a lover and an excellent executive in a single lifetime. That is why people who try to lead double lives find they are shirking one of them.

To convince a cynic that miracles are not only possible but commonplace in this world, simply let him watch a hen lay an egg.

When people speak of "the balance of nature," what they really mean is a time when nature is balanced so as to give the human race its next possible edge.

A debunker is successful only as long as he sticks to debunking things most people no longer believe or think important. But as soon as he starts debunking the comfortable myths they really live by, he is on his way to being strung up on a lamp post as a dangerous charlatan and a deceiver of the young.

An old-timer is a guy who, after trudging through winter mud, ice and snow to get to work, spends most of the rest of the day at his desk wistfully recalling aloud the glories of the good old days when you got a shoeshine for a dime.

A woman can't be all bad who solaces her soul by keeping a plant of some kind bravely green and growing in the window of her apartment throughout a long and dreary winter. She is the kind of woman a man can marry and brag about to his mother.

So many folks have done such fine things to conserve energy during the present fuel crisis that we hesitate even to mention our own small contribution in this respect. We've given up popcorn for the duration.

The opening notrump is a picture bid. It describes a hand with a definite point count. The standard is 16-18 but more important it describes a hand with a balanced pattern. To get best value from your notrumps the hand pattern should be 4-3-3-3, 4-4-3-2 or 5-3-3-2.

Since the notrump is a picture bid it is possible to develop very effective methods of responding to it. With a balanced hand you simply add your points to your partner's. The total deter-

Consultant Talks Of School Survey

Consultants with Illinois School Consulting Service discussed a possible survey of School District 117 concerning the fiscal status and methods of determining projections for the future.

Fred Burnham, senior partner in the firm, discussed possible service his firm could provide for District 117 during a regular board meeting Tuesday evening.

Mr. Burnham said the overall survey would take between three and four months, but that the first step or basic evaluation could be completed in from 30 to 60 days.

Members of the board are seeking independent advice concerning the financial position of the district. Board members, at least a portion of them, have differing opinions with the administration concerning the financial condition of the district as it is today.

Mr. Burnham said his firm could handle the basics of the two major funds: educational and building. He said if there were a financial problem, he could also, should the board wish the service, recommend methods of solving the problems.

Lawsuits Started
School District 117 has been notified that lawsuits have been started on behalf of a Bloomington man in connection with a car-bus accident north of Jacksonville May 24, 1973, and on behalf of the estate of a child concerning the death Oct. 18. Both actions are in the hands of the insurance carrier and the school attorney.

Energy Problem
The cost of fuel oil jumped from 13.69-cents to 31.90-cents per gallon from July to Jan. 4. Apex Oil Co. notified administrative officials that the supply would be the same as last year but the price would fluctuate.

Plans are underway to coordinate the energy saving practices within the district. Cecil Franseen asked that such a program be instituted immediately to see that thermostats could be lowered and heat reduced on weekends. He said an overall program should be started to make sure the district takes advantage of every possible savings, particularly in view of the increased cost of fuel.

The board authorized an application to the Capital Development Board and OSPI for debt service credit on building programs and new construction since 1969. Assistant Supt. Fred Osburn said the grant would be in the neighborhood of $83,000. He said the amount would be sent to the county treasurer and the bond tax reduced to the taxpayer by the same amount. Mr. Osburn said he could not say when the amount would be credited, but he expected no great delay.

Snow removal from school parking lots throughout the district cost $674.25 for outside labor and equipment. Some areas, according to Grounds Supervisor Bob Gill, were just too large for school equipment to handle.

Rebuild Mower

Mr. Gill received board approval to rebuild a gang-mower before the grass-mowing season. The machine will need between $1,100 and $1,300 in parts and require about 100 or more hours of time by school personnel. The cafeteria report showed a favorable balance, with the addition of more than $5,000 in federal funds. Members of the board noted that about 25 per cent of the total school lunches served were on a free basis. Mr. Osburn said part of the reason for increased free lunches was the change of eligibility requirements for free lunches.

The board confirmed the appointment of James Agner who has been employed by Four Rivers Special Education District as assistant director at a salary base of $19,500.

A list of nineteen courses to be present for adult education in the second semester was approved by the board. Courses will be offered if sufficient interest is indicated.

Dr. Clifford Crone, superintendent of District 117, was not present for the meeting. Dr. Crone is participating in a Danforth program of training for school administrators. He was selected as one of 40 from throughout the country to take part in the select program.

Animal Control Act Undergoes Changes

Some important changes have been made in the Illinois Animal Control Act. These changes were approved by the Advisory Board of Livestock Commissioners of the State of Illinois. The Morgan County Commissioners feel the public should be informed of the following:

Owners of dogs four months or more of age, that are to remain in Illinois; unless confined; shall have such dogs vaccinated for rabies, fee $5.00, and shall register such dogs and pay the annual registration fee which is $4.00 to the county in which the dog owner resides. When an animal has received a vaccination for rabies, the certificate does not become official until registration is completed, signed by the registering officer and the county fee has been paid. County Kennel license is a special fee: $15.00 for 20 dogs or less and $7.50 for each additional 20 dogs.

The registering, issuing of tags and collection of county fees is a county matter and will be handled at the courthouse; however as administrator of Morgan County Rabies Program, the Gross-Deichmann Veterinary Clinic has agreed and been authorized to serve as registering officers and will issue the tag and collect the fee for the county, also as a public service and convenience. All checks must be made payable to Morgan County Treasurer, for the county fee.

If a dog or cat has bitten a person and has not had a current rabies vaccination, the animal must be confined and observed by a veterinarian, for a period of 10 days, at the owner's expense.

If a dog or cat has bitten a person and has had a current rabies vaccination, it may or may not, at the discretion of a veterinarian, be allowed to be confined on the owner's premises and under the owner's supervision.

In either case, the biting animal must be examined at the office of a veterinarian within 24 hours of the time of the bite and again following confinement. If no current rabies vaccination is in effect, it will be given at the time of the final examination, dependent upon the condition of the animal.

It is advisable that rabies vaccinations be given to cats.

If in an extreme circumstance a biting animal must be destroyed, the brain must be kept intact for purposes of testing for rabies by the State of Illinois Laboratories.

The owner of any animal which has been confined three or more times for biting may be charged with maintaining a public nuisance.

An owner making claim for loss of animals or poultry killed or injured by dogs shall report such loss to their veterinarian or the Administrator within 24

THE GREATER JACKSONVILLE Crusade for Christ with Bill Glass Kick-Off Rally was held last night at the First Presbyterian Church. The Crusade will be held April 21 to 28 and preparations are now underway. Above, the Rev. Harold Hendrick, Executive Secretary of the Crusade, discusses some of the plans for the event.

Officials Optimistic

Urban Renewal Plans Advance

By OLIVER WIEST

City officials, Urban Renewal engineers, and Redeveloper Paul Pieper met last night to resolve some of the last details left in the program's planning stage and promised a burst of construction activity this summer.

The meeting was the first since the working sessions were suspended in November to give the engineers a chance to coordinate the phases of the downtown renovation project.

Current projections call for the road construction phase of the program to begin this summer followed closely by the start of the Central Park facelifting and the construction of four one-story buildings adjoining the north and south sides of the park.

New Jersey Man To Be Principal Of Franklin High

FRANKLIN — At the January meeting of board of education for Community Unit 1, Robert E. Bergschneider, president, announcement was made Joseph Somerset of Haddonfield, New Jersey, has accepted the position as high school principal. He will begin duties on Feb. 1st.

Board members were informed by E. L. Welch of Allied Design Consultants, Inc., of Springfield electrical work at the schools completed to conform with the fire safety code and also a satisfactory inspection was made of work on window replacement.

Superintendent Dr. Corrine Greife was instructed to send out specifications to obtain a 60-passenger bus. The Franklin High School seniors asked the board to review a contract with The Ozark Opry, for sponsoring a show at the school auditorium March 4th.

Approval was given for purchase of a Chef Master, for $119 and a portable propane heater for the bus garage.

Project engineers predicted the city would be ready to let bids for the road work and the plaza construction in March.

Pieper said he was ready to start construction of the first of the four buildings near the park anytime but, as a practical matter, wouldn't begin work until the other construction was underway.

The Urban Renewal Committee, headed by Ald. Norm Ackerman, approved a construction traffic pattern submitted by Benton and Associates, traffic engineers. The plan calls for north-south traffic to be routed around the east side of the square while work was underway on the west side and vice versa.

Motorists will be routed around the square on Mauvaisterre and Sandy streets.

The committee also approved a revised plan for the central plaza which calls for the deletion of about 100 trees originally proposed. Sixty-three trees will be planted under the new plans. Many of the trees had to be left out because they would have obstructed the fire lanes.

The central plaza, which will include an outdoor theater, play areas, and bathrooms, may be completed next fall.

The major remaining detail to be resolved is the type and placement of a canopy which will front all buildings on the square.

Basham Bros. Burglarized

County police checked out a burglary report at Basham Brothers Trailer Sales in Murrayville Tuesday night.

Deputies found that the building had been broken into and ransacked but the owners discovered nothing missing.

Solons Ponder Speed Limit

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — A legislative committee discussed Tuesday a proposal to give Illinois two different speed limits — an energy conservation limit and a highway safety limit.

Legislation under consideration by a joint House and Senate committee would make 55 miles per hour the energy conservation limit and current speed limits in the state would be retained as the highway safety limit.

A violation of the energy conservation limit would subject a motorist to a fine. But — assuming he did not exceed the safety limit as well — his conviction would not be reported to the secretary of state's office and would not be considered a moving traffic violation.

Violation of the highway safety limit, however, would be considered a moving violation and reported to the secretary of state's office, which can suspend drivers' licenses for three such violations within a 12-month period. Motorists convicted of exceeding the safety limit also would be fined.

The joint committee has scheduled a meeting for Jan. 29 to decide whether to adopt the proposal and recommend it to the General Assembly.

A one-day assembly session is scheduled Jan. 29 for possible changes in the state's speed limit.

The federal government has given states until March 3 to establish the 55 m.p.h. limit or face loss of highway aid.

The current Illinois speed limit for cars is 70 m.p.h. on interstate and other four-lane highways and 65 m.p.h. on other major two-lane primary and secondary roads.

The current speed limit for trucks is 55 m.p.h. on the four-lane highways and 50 m.p.h. on other roads.

A committee staff member, Fred Schoenfeld, said Illinois could comply with the federal mandate simply by changing the numbers in the statutes and on highway signs.

But Schoenfeld told the committee that would make driving in excess of 55 m.p.h. a moving violation. He said some committee members felt there should be a distinction between exceeding a limit designed to conserve fuel and a limit designed for highway safety.

Schoenfeld said that if this distinction is approved by the legislature, two sets of highway speed limit signs would be necessary. One set would tell motorists of the new 55 m.p.h. energy conservation limit. The other set would tell motorists of the safety limit.

"You can't just have the 55 m.p.h. signs, or else the motorist isn't going to know when he's risking a moving violation," Schoenfeld said.

A spokesman for the state Department of Transportation, John Kramer, told the committee two sets of speed limit signs would increase substantially the cost involved in reducing the state speed limit to 55 m.p.h.

Kramer had estimated it would cost $200,000-$250,000 to change the numbers on existing signs. But he said the cost would be much higher if completely new signs and signposts are needed.

Earlier in the day, Kramer told the committee the DOT recommended leaving the truck speed limit on two-lane roads at 50 m.p.h.

Spokesmen for trucking organizations urged the committee to make the 55 m.p.h. limit uniform for trucks and cars on all roads.

"It is our frank opinion that if we lower the speed limit for cars while at the same time raise the speed limit for trucks, the public just won't accept it, and we just don't have the state police to make them," Kramer said.

Kramer said the DOT's recommendation would allow both cars and trucks to travel 55 m.p.h. on four-lane highways.

The committee decided to withhold a recommendation on the question until its Jan. 29 meeting.

Howlett Reacts To Court Ruling

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Secretary of State Michael Howlett said Tuesday a court decision removing jobs in his office from civil service protection will not result in mass firings.

But Howlett added that he would like to see the Illinois Legislature approve measures to give the secretary of state the right to establish a personnel code for the several thousand persons he employs.

A spokesman for Howlett said that such a code would allow the secretary of state to test his employees and give them job security.

Supporters of personnel code protection argue that when a candidate is elected to office he is tempted to use purely political reasons to fire employees hired by his predecessor.

Judge Paul Verticchio of Circuit Court ruled Monday against extension of civil service protection to the secretary of state's office.

He acted on a suit filed in 1972 by five Democrats who charged Republican officeholders were attempting to lock Republican patronage workers into jobs before Democrats took over state office.

Former Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie and former Secretary of State John Lewis had agreed in late 1972 to extend civil service protection afforded to employees of the governor's office and other state departments to those employed by the secretary of state.

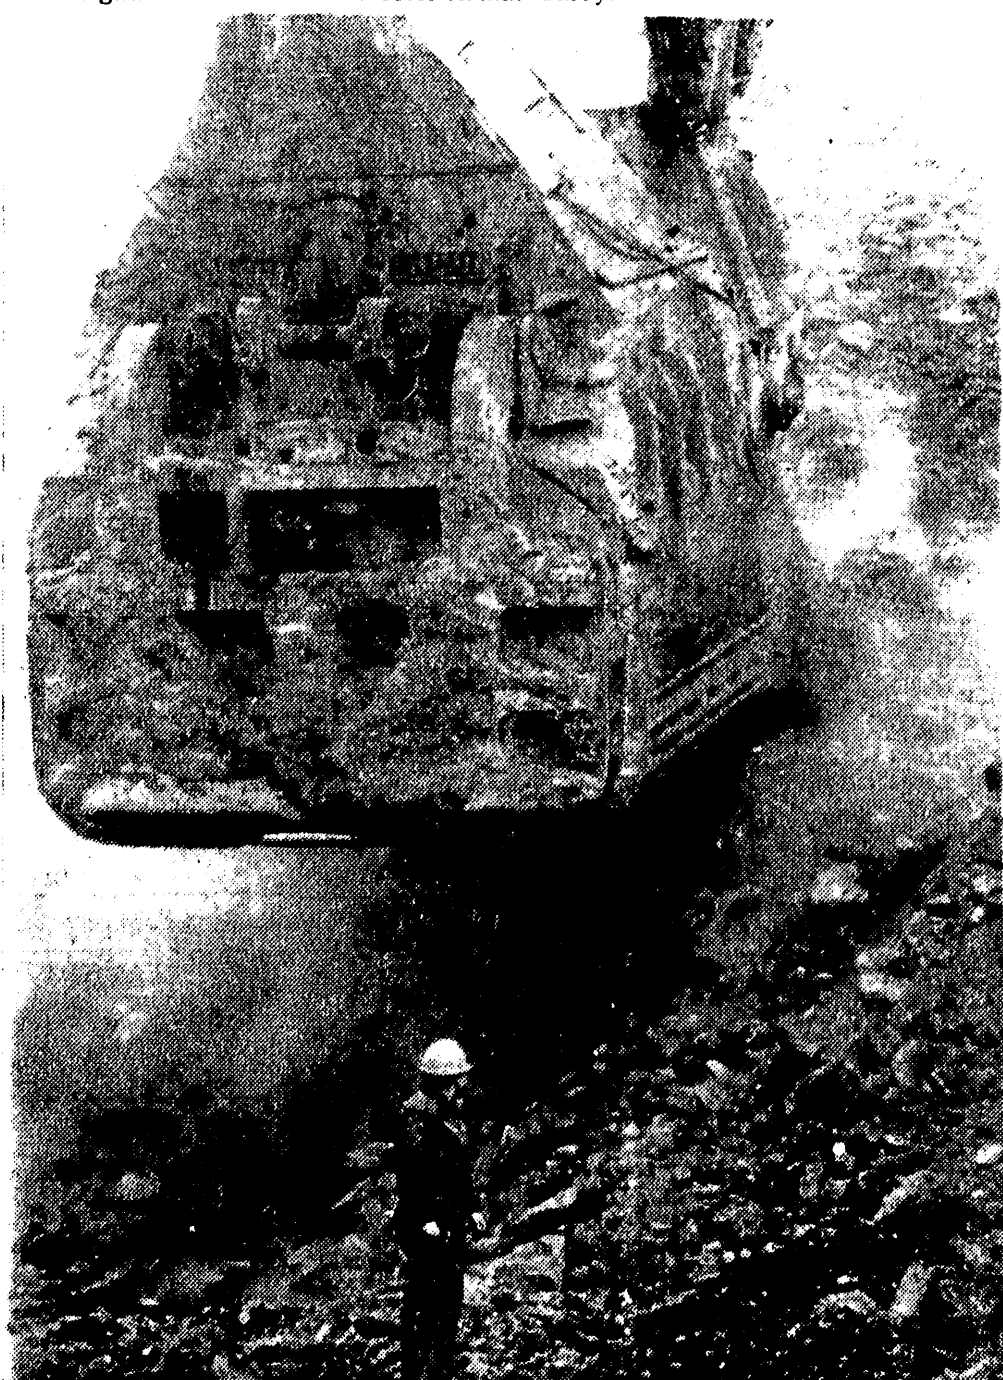

Judge Verticchio said in his ruling that this action was not permissible since the two offices are supposed to be independent.

The ruling affected several thousand employees of the secretary of state.
